Americans Crush Last Nip Stand In South Luzon; Control Sulus

By United Press

The American drive on Naha in southern Okinawa stalled against savage Japanese resistance today but invasion forces continued gains in other sectors with practically no opposition.

To the north Marines captured a submarine base on Unten bay in a mile and a half advance. Torpedoes and mines were seized but the Japanese had removed all submarines and other craft.

Army troops opened the entrance to Nakagusuku bay, one of the best naval anchorages south of Japan, by an amphibious landing Tuesday on Taugen (Tsuikata) island, about 10 miles off the southeast Okinawa coast. Only moderate resistance was encountered and officers expected the enemy to be cleared from the island soon.

Warships In Bay

Other troops had captured almost two thirds of the bay's shoreline and Tokyo said American warships already were operating in the bay.

Troops of the 24th army corps battled to crack the Japanese defense lines four miles above the island capital, Naha.

Marine artillery was moved south to bolster Army guns in the heaviest artillery barrage of the Pacific war. Naval guns offshore continued to pound Japanese positions.

Gun Fire Heavy

The Japanese virtually were matching the fire from favorable emplacements on two ridges from which they had perfect observation.

No ground advances had been reported in the past 24 hours. The Japanese were fighting from caves and underground pillboxes and blockhouses from which they had to be dug out with flamethrowers and bayonets.

In the Philippines, American troops crushed the last organized Japanese resistance on southern Luzon and seized control of the Sulu archipelago in the south by occupying Jolo island.

Land on Busuanga

Other troops landed on Busuanga island, north of American-controlled Palawan across the Sulu sea from Mindanao and ended Japanese control of 3,000 lepers in the Culion colony.

American bombers from the Philippines continued neutralization attacks on Formosa and sank or damaged three more Japanese cargo vessels in maintaining the aerial blockade of China sea shipping.

Radio Tokyo today identified three American carriers, which it claimed were sunk off Okinawa Friday, as the Essex, the converted carrier Langley and the auxiliary carrier Hipper.

"Joy to Be Free"

ARCHBISHOP August Cardinal Hlond, primate of Poland, who was freed from 21 months of German captivity by the U. S. Ninth Army when Wiedenbruck was captured, refuses to comment on his treatment by the Nazis, saying only it was a "great joy to be free." SOLONS STUDY DEMOBILIZATION

Army Plans To Send All Able Troops Overseas In Near Future

WASHINGTON, April 11—Congress took its first steps toward demobilization legislation today as the Army revealed today to send virtually all physically-fit troops in this country overseas as soon as they can be replaced.

Chairman Andrew J. May, D. Ky., of the house military affairs committee said he believed the fall of Germany was "close enough" for the war department to let congress in on its plans for demobilization and reorganization of the Army after V-E day.

He asked Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to send the proper Army officers to a closed meeting of the committee next Tuesday to discuss legislation "to coordinate the general problems with which we will all be concerned."

Noting that such problems would be determined "largely by developments from month to month in the theatres of war and particularly following the fall of Germany," May added:

"Then of course at the end of the war we will have the problem of general demobilization of the Army and rebuilding of the regular establishment. The size of this organization will naturally affect the question of the necessity or non-necessity for universal military training."

Committee members have been trying for months to learn the war department's estimate on the number of men to be released after Germany's fall as well as the volume of men and equipment to be transferred from Europe to the Pacific.

The war department already has revealed general plans for partial demobilization after V-E day, under which some men will be discharged on a point system. But it has declined to give details of the program for fear of possible adverse effect on troop morale.

News that the Army is planning to get all able-bodied troops in this country overseas, presumably to take the place of battle-weary combat troops for occupation duty in Europe and fighting in the Pacific. (Continued on Page Two)

Nazis Reported Shoving Out Hitler As New Split Develops; Berlin Deserted

LONDON, April 11—British "official quarters" circulated a report today that the Nazis were ousting Adolf Hitler and that he was dying. Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief, interior minister and commander of the German home army, was said to be replacing Hitler as supreme ruler in the Reich as the military disaster in the west mounted almost hourly.

The semi-official British Press Association and the Exchange Telegraph agency carried almost duplicate stories of the Nazi split and attributed them to "reports reaching official or authoritative quarters in London."

Sources close to the British foreign office said they had no knowledge of the reports and told the United Press the matter looked like "utter rumor."

Make Little Difference

Even if the rumor turned out to be true, these sources said, it would make little difference in the course of the war.

It was possible that the reports came from members of British commons—perhaps members of Prime Minister Churchill's government—who could not be named. Nevertheless, there was nothing new in German propaganda to lend credence to reports of Hitler's downfall.

"It seems certain that a grave split among Nazi leaders is developing," E. P. Stapoole, lobby correspondent of the Press association, wrote.

"Foreigners who for some time have been in very close touch with Germany are also convinced that Hitler is today a dying man. They report he is looking terribly ill. Some wonder whether he will ever be captured alive."

Stapoole speculated that Hitler might commit suicide or be assassinated "by some of his own people turning against him." He said German morale was broken and the German people only wanted the war to end.

The Exchange Telegraph story also said it was "doubtful Hitler ever will be captured alive."

Party 'Falling To Pieces'

"Foreign observers who have had direct contact with leading members of the Nazi hierarchy are convinced that the Nazi party is falling to pieces and have not hesitated to pass on this considered opinion to official quarters in London," the dispatch said.

"They speak of gathering unrest in Germany, although this is not expected to take the form of political revolt. . . . The Germans' moral apathy is such that they are not capable of doing anything to extricate themselves from the hideous situation."

LAUSCHE ACTS TO INCREASE OHIO FOOD CROP

COLUMBUS, April 11—Gov. Frank J. Lausche today moved to increase Ohio's 1945 food production after State Agriculture Director John M. Hodson warned that farm production in the state may be crippled by labor shortages.

Lausche asked State Selective Service Director Chester W. Goble to send copies of Hodson's statement to all local draft boards as a warning for them to proceed cautiously with the induction of farm workers.

He said copies of the warning also would be sent to the mayors of all Ohio cities with an urgent plea for them to encourage victory garden programs in their cities to supplement the regular food supply.

Hodson's warning was contained in a letter to Sen. Elmer Thomas, D., Okla., chairman of the senate agriculture committee which is investigating the effect of labor shortages on the nation's lagging food production.

He said labor shortages and scarcities of vital farm machinery would result in a substantial drop in Ohio meat production and force many farmers to switch from canning crops to field crops which require comparatively little hand labor.

"Vegetable and canning crops will be approximately 40 per cent of normal," Hodson said. "Much of this acreage will be put into the production of such crops as oats and soybeans because they can be grown with less labor than canning crops."

Clark's Army Strikes All Along Line To Prevent Nazis Falling Back

ROME, April 11—Both coastal wings of the German defenses in Italy swayed back today before concerted Allied drives which captured the La Spezia naval base's outpost of Massa and gained two and a half miles through three Po valley towns.

The American Fifth army stormed through Massa, German stronghold 18 miles southeast of La Spezia, and on the other side of Italy the British Eighth army's new offensive across the Senio river toppled Lugo, 28 miles southeast of Bologna, Fusignano, four miles northeast of Lugo, and Cotignola, four and a half south-east of Lugo.

Gen. Mark W. Clark's 15th army group was striking all along the line in a bid to whittle down the war to end.

PRODUCTION OF ARMS REDUCED BY 10 PER CENT

WASHINGTON, April 11—The government continued to level off arms production today in anticipation of V-E day.

In the newest moves, the war department ordered a nationwide cut of 10 percent in ammunition production schedules for 1945 and revealed that 12 tank plants now under construction would not be completed.

The department said that "favorable progress of the war has made it unnecessary" to complete the plants.

These moves, coupled with the recent leveling off of small arms production, made it clear that the armament crisis which arose during the period of the Ardennes breakthrough last December was past.

Officials emphasized that in many cases the ammunition cutbacks represent materials not yet in production. None of the 12 tank plants had reached the capacity production stage. The importance of having existing plants meet their production schedules was stressed.

Solons Urge 'Soda Jerks' Be Dismissed From OPA

WASHINGTON, April 11—Senate food investigators today threatened legislative action to make OPA obey congress, and advocated "kicking out OPA officials" as a starter.

With angry cries against the "soda jerks" in some high OPA posts, members of the food investigating committee denounced the agency for its failure to give price relief to meat packers and for maintaining that the meat black market was mostly "sheer rumor."

More firewords were indicated as the committee continued its investigation.

Chairman Elmer Thomas, D., Okla., said congress never intended that OPA fix prices that would "force meat packers into bankruptcy." But OPA officials, he added, have "set themselves up higher than anybody."

"Maybe the best way to correct this thing is to get some new men down at OPA," he said.

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., recommended a "thorough OPA housecleaning."

"I mean kicking out officials,"

LAST GERMAN STRONGHOLDS IN CITY CLEARED

21 Districts Of Austrian Capital Under Control Of Red Forces

ESCAPE ROUTE NARROWS

Soviet Artillery Covers Only Highways Running From Vital City

By United Press

An Austrian broadcast said today that the last three Nazi-held districts of Vienna have been cleared, presumably completing the liberation of the Austrian capital.

Radio Sender Austria said the Leopoldstadt (second) and Brigittenau (20th) districts, both between the Danube river canal and the river itself, and the Floridsdorf (21st) district east of the river finally had been liberated.

Occupation of the remainder of Vienna's 21 districts—all those west of the rivers and canal—was completed yesterday by Marshal Fedor I. Tolbukhin's Russian Third Ukrainian army.

A Soviet front dispatch said Tolbukhin had captured a crossing over the Danube canal into the Leopoldstadt and Brigittenau districts.

Patriots May Be Active

Radio Sender Austria, presumably operated by Austrian patriots or the Red army, did not specify whether the last three districts were cleared by the third army or Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's adjacent second Ukrainian army. There also was a possibility that Austrian patriots had thrown the last of the Germans out of their capital city.

Malinovsky's forces at last reports were driving along the east bank of the Danube less than eight miles northeast of Floridsdorf. They had narrowed the German escape gap from Vienna to less than 10 miles, already spanned by artillery fire.

The German DNB agency said the Russians had been thrown back to the famous Ringstrasse, a boulevard in the heart of Vienna and just west of the Danube canal. Bitter street battles developed between the parliament building and the Vienna castle, DNB said.

Back Door Menace

The liberation of Vienna would topple the strongest bastion athwart the back door to Germany and the Nazi last-ditch defense zone in the Austrian and Bavarian Alps.

Tolbukhin's forces, without waiting for the mop-up of Vienna, already have driven beyond St. Poelten, 32 miles west of the Austrian capital, Stockholm said. St. Poelten lies 201 miles east of Munich, 141 miles from Berchtesgaden and some 260 miles from American Third army spearheads.

Soft Coal Miners Win $1.30 A Day Increase In New Wage Contract

WASHINGTON, April 11—Soft coal producers and the United Mine Workers prepared today to ratify a new wage contract estimated by operators to mean an average daily raise of $1.30 for miners and a $150,000,000 a year expense for the industry.

Negotiators for the two parties reached agreement last night shortly after the government seized 235 coal mines that had been beset by wildcat strikes traceable in part to the uncertainty of the nearly six weeks of wage discussions.

The seized mines were located in seven states—Pennsylvania, Ohio, Alabama, Virginia, Indiana, Tennessee and Kentucky—and for the most part were the so-called captive mines operated by steel companies.

The new contract, which still must receive government approval, will be put in final form by an operators-UMW subcommittee this afternoon and placed before the full negotiating committee for final ratification at 3:30 p. m. Ewt.

Royalty Not Given

The 10-cents a ton royalty demanded by UMW President John L. Lewis was not in the final contract. Industry sources said concessions won by the UMW would mean a 25-cents-a-ton increase in production costs of coal but would not mean added output.

This assertion will be studied when the contract goes before the War Labor Board, Office of Price Administration and Stabilization Director William H. Davis. The government agencies hope to complete their task before the extension of the old contract comes to an end on April 30.

Doubt WLB Approval

Some sources doubted, however, that the WLB would approve the new agreement without modification of some of its provisions. Such action was expected to precipitate a new battle between the board and Lewis, two old adversaries.

An operator source said the new agreement was to run for one year—contracts previously have run two years—and would thereafter be renewable on 20 days notice. He said it also included these provisions:

THREE ARMIES ON LAST LAP TO DOOMED CITY

First, Third, Ninth Brush Aside Disorganized German Opposition

99 MILES FROM CAPITAL

Juncture With Red Army Within 24 To 72 Hours Is Predicted

BULLETIN

WITH U. S. NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY, April 11—The Ruhr valley arsenal city of Essen was captured by American Ninth army troops today.

By United Press

Three American armies, 1,000,000 strong, rolled unchecked over the last 100 miles to Berlin today and field dispatches said the Americans were expected to meet the Red army beyond the Elbe river in the next 24 to 72 hours.

American Ninth army troops on the northern wing raced five miles beyond Brunswick to within 99 miles of the dying Nazi capital. The First army was 114 miles from Berlin and the Third army 126 to 130 miles away, on the basis of front reports lagging hours behind the speeding American tanks.

The First army at last reports was 149 miles due west of Russian troops on the Niesse river and about 50 miles from the Elbe.

A dispatch from United Press War Correspondent John McDermott reported, however, that leaders of the First army tank forces expected to be far beyond the Elbe and linked up with the west-bound Russians before Saturday.

German resistance before the Elbe was shattered completely and nothing but undefended road blocks lay in the path of the charging First army.

McDermott reported that the juncture with the Red army might be effected before tonight tomorrow if the Germans failed to rally their disorganized forces for a delaying defensive fight on the Elbe.

Would Split Reich

The link-up would split Germany in two, seal the fate of Berlin and probably end all organized enemy resistance except perhaps in the "islands of resistance" in the Bavarian redbut, along the North sea coast and in the Ruhr.

The Elbe river fortress of Magdeburg was only 50 miles beyond the Ninth army's advanced columns, which went five miles past Brunswick for the closest approach to Berlin.

Crowding close on the Ninth army in the race for Berlin, the First army's tanks were only 114 miles southwest of Berlin, 54 miles from Magdeburg, and 58 miles from the central German communications pivot of Leipzig.

On the southern flank, the Third army, now third in the Berlin "steepchase," was 130 miles southwest of the capital and 114 miles from Dresden.

All three armies were rampaging through the rear areas of the (Continued on Page Two)

2,100 AMERICAN PLANES SMASH REICH TARGETS

LONDON, April 11—More than 2,100 American war planes smashed today at war facilities deep in the southern Reich in the inner triangle of Munich, Regensburg and Nuremberg.

The attack was carried out by about 1,300 Flying Fortresses and Liberators with an escort of more than 850 Mustang and Thunderbolt fighters.

Chief targets were oil storage depots, ordnance depots, freight yards, airfields and an explosives factory—all of them vital to any German attempt to make a stand in the southern "inner fortress."

The attack followed a night assault by 800 RAF bombers on Berlin, Leipzig and Plauen, 60 miles south of Leipzig.

The bombers made their attacks in good weather. Generally good results were observed in the attack on the Kraiburg explosives plant near Muhlendorf.

German east front divisions, with First army forces at Aulben only 149 miles from the Red army on the Neisse river at Forst.

Resist In South

Only at the southern end of the western battle lines were the Germans offering any coherent resistance. There crack elite guards divisions fought tooth and nail to slow the American Seventh army's drive across Bavaria toward the Nazis' boasted "last redoubt" in the southern mountains.

In the north, Canadian troops plowed ahead through the Elbe valley within 20 miles or less of the North sea coast and British Second army forces rolled up for Hamburg in a weakly-opposed drive aimed at turning the Elbe line and lopping off all of northwestern Germany and Denmark.

The British advance on the coast prompted Gen. Eisenhower's dramatic announcement on the German collapse. In a special message broadcast to German North sea port officials and workers, Eisenhower called upon them to prevent sabotage of the great harbors and naval bases by fanatical Nazi demolition squads.

Ike Warns Civilians

Eisenhower declared that the German armies of the west were in the process of dissolution and that his troops were moving in to take over the northern seaports. "In these last weeks of the war the future of your towns is in the gravest danger from fanatics who may make a last-minute attempt to make the ports unusable," he said.

"The power of the men behind these fanatics is crumbling. It will be broken with the arrival of the Allied armies. Then your ports will be used at once. It depends on what you do now which will be the first port reopened."

The proclamation urged civilians to avoid conscription into the Volksturm and to prevent the Nazis from confiscating their food supplies.

As he spoke, the American Ninth army was breaking loose on the rolling plains far to the east of captured Hannover. Vanguards of the 30th infantry and fifth armored division rolled ahead on the main Berlin autobahn north of Brunswick, 104 miles due west of the capital, and reached a point five miles east of the city.

Close In on Brunswick

Doughboys of the 84th division, conquerors of Hannover only 24 hours ago, were closing on Brunswick from the west, while the 83rd infantry and second armored divisions outflanked the city with advances on parallel roads 15 to 23 miles to the south. There they were skirting the northern corner of the Harz mountains.

Brunswick itself was reported festooned with white flags hung out by the war-weary civilian population.

United Press War Correspondent Robert Vermillion reported that the Ninth army columns were rolling forward at top speed over a countryside virtually unmarked by war. Throngs of German children lined the roads to wave and smile at the Berlin-bound Yanks.

United Press Correspondent John McDermott reported a similar triumphal parade on Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First army line on the southern rim of the Harz mountains.

Hodges Third Armored division, fighting fiercely to avenge the slaying of their commander, Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose, was out in front of the advance with a 40-mile spurt yesterday that ended with the capture of Nordhausen, 115 miles southwest of Berlin.

There they were only 54 miles southwest of the Elbe river fortress of Magdeburg, already menaced by the Ninth army columns flanking Brunswick from the south.

Eight miles southeast of Nordhausen, an unidentified armored column rolled ahead 31 miles to take Aulben, 114 miles southwest of Berlin, and a third force advanced 36 miles into Clingen, 10 miles farther south. At Clingen, the Yanks were only 57 miles due west of Leipzig, through which German troops have been reported funneling southward toward Bavaria.

On the First army's right flank, Patton's Third army columns closed to within four miles west and 2 1/2 miles southwest of Erfurt at Göttsfeldt and Schmira after gaining six to seven miles yesterday. Berlin said the Americans had reached Erfurt, and unconfirmed Luxembourg radio reports placed them beyond the city enroute to the Czechoslovak border, 65 miles to the southeast. Almost 50 miles to the south-the German might in Italy before it could fall back to join the home-land defenders in a last hopeless stand.

Troops of the Fifth army 442nd and 473rd regiments cracked through Massa against stubborn resistance. A communique said they struck on northwest toward La Spezia on the Ligurian sea and were well across the Frigido river which flows through the Massa area.

The fall of Massa and the river crossing four miles to the north-east followed several days of bitter fighting. The resistance was built around heavy artillery batteries on Punta Bianca southeast of La Spezia, designed to guard both the land and sea approaches to the naval base.

Eighth army forces preceded by flame throwers and supported by a record air bombardment plunged across the Senio at Fusignano and San Severo. The first impact carried more than 1,000 yards beyond the river.

By night the bridgeheads were extended and fused. Bridges were thrown over the river, and tanks and strong supporting forces moved in behind the vanguard.

Lt. Gen. Sir Bernard C. Freyberg's second New Zealand division was taking a leading part in the new offensive. Italian troops crossed the Senio north of Suisano and were advancing west of Alfontino.

South of Highway No. 9, between Bologna and Rimini, other units of the Eighth army crossed the Senio and secured a bridgehead near Cufiano.

Throughout the day yesterday Allied planes carried on their greatest attack since the invasion of southern France last August. They flew 1,650 sorties.

TRUCK OVERTURNS

A truck owned by the Segal-Schadel company, Chillicothe, overturned on the Columbus pike early Wednesday, according to a sheriff's office report, when an automobile cut too close in front of it. The truck, the report stated, got off the edge of the pavement onto the berm of the drainage ditch. This caused the load of baled waste paper on the truck to shift to one side causing the truck to overturn. A fence along the side of the ditch was torn down. Damage to the truck was slight, the sheriff reported.

Soft Coal Miners Win $1.30 A Day Increase In New Wage Contract

No change in the present clause defining which employees are covered by the contract. Lewis had demanded that 60,000 supervisory employees be covered by the agreement.

Ickes Given Authority Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes was directed to operate the 235 mines seized by the government. He appointed the mine owners as federal managers, ordered the American flag run up over the pits and the miners to report for work tomorrow morning.

In the seizure order, President Roosevelt gave Ickes authority to take over any and all soft coal mines to maintain production. It could apply to every coal pit in the nation, some 7,000. It was interpreted as blanket authority for Ickes to do whatever he believes necessary for an indefinite period to keep production going.

An increase from $7.50 to $9 in the seven-hour day pay of electricians and mechanics in the Appalachian area.

A $1.07 daily increase for outside day men. Pay raises for drillers, shot-firers and loaders in mechanical mining units to within $1 of the top rate for unit operators.

Thomas warned that he would demand legislative action unless OPA gives relief to packers of its own accord. He said he would back an amendment to the price control bill to require OPA to set "reasonable margin of profit" on each type of animal slaughtered. Sen. Scott Lucas, D. Ill., also favored such a move.

Meanwhile, in a new survey of the food situation, the War Food administration reported that civilians in the next few months must expect "particularly short" supplies of canned fish, canned fruit, butter, poultry and meat.

Local shortages of potatoes and rice will develop, but the outlook appears good for eggs, cereal products, fresh vegetables, apples, citrus fruit, fresh and frozen fish and milk.

The OPA said it was working on a plan to get more meat into federally-inspected plants so there would be more for all users.

Mahon suggested that the Army "scrape the bottom of the barrel" in this country before switching combat troops from Europe to the Pacific after V-E day.

Stimson replied that of 2,900,000 men on duty in the U. S., almost half, or about 1,400,000, already are being trained for foreign duty. He said 180,000 more were in Army hospitals, while the remaining 1,365,000 were in essential administrative and service jobs.

"Every one of these (latter) soldiers, except those who have already seen overseas service or who are physically disqualified, is earmarked for foreign service as soon as he can be replaced by an overseas returnee or a limited service man," Stimson said.

FIREMEN ANSWER TWO CALLS IN 15 MINUTES

A trash pile burning ignited some paint cans at the rear of the Clifton garage at 8:45 a. m. Wednesday endangering the garage roof was brought under control by city firemen.

At 9 a. m. Wednesday firemen were again called out to put out what was reported to be a burning truck filled with scrap paper. The truck had turned over on the Columbus pike, just north of town. Firemen reported that they saw no evidence of any fire when they arrived on the scene of the accident.

No loss was caused by fire on either of the calls, they said.

PAASIKIVI MAY BE NAMED AGAIN TO LEAD FINNS

By United Press
The Finnish home radio reported today that Juho K. Paasikivi was "certain" to be renamed premier of Finland at the head of a new coalition government.

Paasikivi and his cabinet resigned Monday, but President Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim asked the members to continue in office until a new government could take over.

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, did not speculate on when the new premier would be named, noting that "the formation of the new government is still in the preliminary stages."

LAST GERMAN STRONGHOLDS IN CITY CLEARED

Ukrainian army beyond Neulenggenbach, 13 miles east of St. Poelten, however, Neulenggenbach was captured by the Russians Sunday.

Tolbukhin's forces liberated all but three of Vienna's 21 municipal districts yesterday, capturing the Franz Joseph station, the general hospital, cavalry barracks, the science academy and other buildings.

Disrupt Nazi Plans
The Soviet high command reported that the Russians advanced so rapidly through the streets of Vienna that the Germans had no opportunity to carry out their planned delaying stand. More than 3,000 Germans were killed and 2,000 captured yesterday.

Malinovsky's second army narrowed the German escape gap on the east bank of the Danube to 10 miles with the capture of Deutsch Wagram, eight miles northeast of the Floridsdorf district of Vienna, yesterday.

That left only one road, the Vienna-Bрно highway, and two minor railways out of Vienna in German hands. All three were under Soviet artillery fire. Deutsch Wagram was five miles from the highway.

It was at Deutsch Wagram that Napoleon put Archduke Charles' Austrian forces to rout in an historic two-day battle in July 1809 in which 58,000 soldiers were killed or wounded.

Trenches Captured
Northeast of Vienna, the Second army captured the Czechoslovak industrial center of Trenchin, 65 miles east of Brno, and pressed on to Kovalovec, three miles from the Moravian border.

Arms factories and 20 underground war supply dumps were captured at Trenchin.

Far to the north, the third White Russian army counted 134,000 Germans killed or captured in the battle that toppled Koenigsberg, capital of East Prussia. Four towns on the outskirts of Koenigsberg were captured yesterday as the Soviets rammed the enemy survivors deeper into the Samland peninsula west of the capital.

Lausche Still Determined To Give The State Best Government He Knows

BY GRANT DILLMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, April 11—Gov. Frank J. Lausche—Ohio's first Democratic governor in six years—today was as fiercely determined to give Ohio the best government he knows how as when he took his oath of office on the capitol steps three months ago.

The past months have left their mark on the state's bushy-haired chief executive. He obviously is tired. There is less spring in his nervous pacings. They have failed, however, to swerve him from his announced intention to act only in the best interests of the state.

They also have plunged him into two bitter legislative battles. The first was with labor, a group which was instrumental in his election. The second—now in the skirmishing stage—is with the powerful and politically important school lobby.

No other governor in recent Ohio political history has dared to oppose openly school demands for additional state aid. Some governors have had bitter criticisms for the school bloc but they were smothered in the privacy of "off-the-record" press conferences and private conversations.

Events have placed Lausche in the contradictory role of titular head of the Democratic party in Ohio. Yet he probably has talked with State Democratic Chairman Albert Horstman fewer than a half-dozen times since he announced for governor.

Lausche has not talked personally with Horstman since he was elected governor. The state chairman has talked with John Lokar, the governor's executive secretary. Political endorsements for state jobs generally have been more of a liability than an asset, however. Lausche is a tireless worker. He seldom comes to work later than 8:30 a. m. The lights in his office—the same office occupied by former Gov. John W. Bricker — frequently burn long after midnight. His reception room always is filled.

The governor has long bouts with his conscience before he arrives at a decision. His long experience on the Cuyahoga county bench probably lends to his judicial attitude. Once he arrives at a decision, however, Lausche rarely wavers.

That characteristic was apparent in his stand on the Ross Act relaxing state controls over the hours of women and children and the Daniels bill to give schools $111,000,000 during the next two years.

It also was apparent in his decision to grant a stay of execution to Johnnie Mae Gardner, 21-year-old Durham, Ala., negro, sentenced to be electrocuted in connection with the holdup slaying of an aged Cincinnati jeweler.

Lausche's final stand on the Ross Act ultimately may lose him some labor support. He also is bucking a powerful political group in the school lobby. But it fits in with his theory that government should be administered for the people of Ohio—not special groups.

WAR-TIME STRIKES

ONE of the strange things about the capitalist system as practised in this country and some other countries is its irresponsibility. Periodically, for instance, by a sort of general consent, organized labor groups are permitted to stop work if they like, no matter how imperatively their production is needed, and to "hold everything" until industrial owners and workers come to agreement. Meanwhile the rest of the nation is expected to wait in suspense, and sometimes in deprivation of essential products, until the representatives of capital and industry come to agreement about wages and condition of work.

The only redeeming feature about such procedure is that, in a time like the present, where the nation is engaged in great and dangerous wars, government and working groups have still been able to carry on without too much hardship and peril. But even so it is a clumsy and dangerous procedure.

Most of us believe in the "capitalist system" and in union labor organizations. But it would be absurd, in view of the frequent strikes in this country, and the unsettlement and loss they often cause, to regard such a loose and unscientific system as anywhere near perfect. It functions better in war time than in peace time—because it has to. But even so, dangerous situations arise. A higher degree of intelligence about the operation of capitalism would seem to be indicated.

DIVIDED FAMILY

"HELLO, Mama; hello, Hans." With these words Wilhelm, an American soldier of German birth, whose company had reached his native town and who had secured leave for a day, greeted his mother and brother in his old home.

The newspaper story stopped here. It should have gone on and told how Wilhelm's German relatives took his appearance in the uniform of a hostile army. Could he make them understand why he was fighting Hitler and the Nazis? Can he and his mother and brother come to a common meeting-ground on the issues of the war?

Wilhelm and his family present in miniature the whole problem of the reeducation of Germany.

Every day's captures mean less of Germany to bomb, and more and more bombs for what is left.

It looks as if the crack Nazi army is cracking.

A stubborn friend still maintains that rationing ain't rational.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 11—The government-directed Russian press had added attacks on Senator Vandenberg and Ex-President Hoover to their literary assaults on the Vatican and Pundit Lippman.

The battering of Hoover started in the Daily Worker and was picked up by Pravda in Moscow a few days later without much alteration of the language. Vandenberg got his simultaneously on Moscow's own original initiative.

All these men did was to advocate methods of implementing the administration position in favor of recognition of the rights of small nations, pledging the new world order to "justice," and Hoover, in addition, pleaded for regional divisions of world authority—which is exactly what the British may desire for Europe to stop creeping Russian power.

The concentration of Russian press artillery on certain American or democratic authorities has left everyone here a bit bewildered. What do the Russians want?

These objectives of Red rhetorical shelling all favor Yalta and its purposes, or at any rate the initial Roosevelt position of the Atlantic Charter, four freedoms, fourteen points, etc. What is Stalin up to?

The common inner explanation here is that Moscow primarily wants to scratch Roosevelt's back at any and all opportunities. The men chosen are Republicans, and while Democrats could have been chosen who occupy the same position, the Moscow government might have roused the White House by setting on them.

That is not enough of an answer. Stalin also promised at Yalta to let some of the London or other Poles not under his control into the new Polish government, but ignored his promise as soon as he got home and is elevating his men exclusively in Poland as in Bulgaria and Romania where the same circumstances prevail.

He subscribed to the Roosevelt peace aims, then sent an ambassador to the San Francisco conference, and in other ways betrayed a lack of interest in carrying them out. What is this game all about? Is Stalin trying to break up the Roosevelt plan while professing to be for it?

An inside check of those best able to know or guess (the top authorities) furnishes a satisfactory answer. At Livadia Stalin is supposed to have repeated again and again that it does not matter what kind of a world order is set up, the big nations are going to run it anyway. Repeatedly he displayed (according to my information) a lack of interest in side-schemes to protect the rights of smaller nations, as if these were fictitious.

All his subsequent acts tie in with that unannounced basic sentiment, his treatment of the Balkans, of central Europe and of the San Francisco conference which is the first assemblage of the small nations.

Then, he is genuinely not opposed to a world order or the Yalta results. He is not trying to sabotage the peace effort. His concept of the world order, however, is that it should serve the interests of the larger nations. He is therefore not interested in the four freedoms, the Atlantic Charter. DIET AND HEALTH

Deficiency Diseases As Seen in Young Children

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

THE diagnosis and treatment of deficiency diseases are more difficult in children than in grownups. This is so because the signs of deficiency disorders ordinarily seen in adults, such as headache and mental depression, do not develop as quickly in children.

A deficiency disease is a disorder due to a lack of various substances in the diet. The substances most likely to be lacking are the vitamins.

Doctor Tom D. Spies and his co-workers, of Alabama, studied 200 children who had evidences of deficiency disorders. The diets of the mothers of these children had been poor during the child-bearing and nursing periods. Frequently the milk supply of the mothers was scanty. The children were breast-fed for several years rather than the usual nine-month period, and the diet was supplemented with such things as corn bread, biscuits, syrup and grits, all of which foods are rich in starches and sugars but low in other necessary food parts.

The deficiencies were evidenced in these children by irritability, poor appetite, sleeplessness, tiredness and mental dullness. The children were unable to concentrate on their work and had poor school records. Most of them were underweight and underdeveloped.

Many of the early signs of deficiency in the children studied by Doctor Spies and his co-workers were like those which occur in grownups. These included loss of appetite, loss of strength and weight, sleeplessness, tiredness, headache, burning and itching of the eyes, burning and soreness of the tongue and lips, pain in the abdomen and diarrhea and constipation. There was also pain in the arms and legs. The muscles lacked strength and the skin was often dry and wrinkled. Tests of the urine showed that the amounts of riboflavin, niacin and thiamin, all parts of the B-complex, were reduced.

A positive diagnosis of deficiency disease was made in the children only when changes in the tissues characteristic of the deficiency were present. For example, when there were peeling of the lips, cracking of the corners of the mouth and scaling about the nose, with sore tongue, it was evident that the children had a riboflavin deficiency.

Of the 200 selected children almost 150 had such a riboflavin deficiency; almost 100 had a deficiency of niacin, and 16 had signs of a lack of thiamin. Some of the children had symptoms of more than one deficiency.

When the right vitamins were administered, the disturbances cleared up promptly. In some instances, the vitamins were given to nursing infants. In others, the vitamins were given to the mothers who were breast-feeding the babies.

Great care must be used in planning the diet of the pregnant woman and of the woman who is nursing her baby and, of course, proper foods should be given to all children to keep the various deficiency disorders from developing.

Tomorrow, Dr. Bundesen will discuss "Renal Colic."

HELEN COMES HOME

by Watkins E. Wright

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

ZOE NESTLED against Mike for a time. Then she looked up into his face, her eyes troubled.

"Mike, do you really think you and I could make a go of it?" she asked.

"Of course we could!" "You see," Zoe went on, "I wouldn't want to make another mistake. If I should leave Paul, I'd want to be sure that my second marriage would last until—" "—Until death do us part," said Mike solemnly. "Listen, Zoe, you're the girl I've been waiting for all my life. You and I could show the world how happy two people can really be. We'll spend part of the winter in Florida—sandy beaches, warm sunshine, moonlight, good drinks, and the races to give us added excitement. We'll travel later—when the war is over, and the world is all straightened out. There's nothing I wouldn't do to make you happy. You believe me, don't you?"

"Yes, Mike," Zoe said, "I do believe you."

"Then what are we waiting for?" "I've got to think, Mike—be sure."

"Okay, sweetness." "Besides," Zoe went on, "what grounds can I use for divorcing Paul? We're getting on all right, to all appearances. He's never really cruel or anything like that. Only he doesn't understand me—how I feel about a lot of things. He makes cutting remarks now and then, when—" "That," said Mike, "is mental cruelty."

"It is?" "Yes, Zoe, sweetness. And many a woman has gotten divorced on such grounds."

"Mental cruelty," said Zoe under her breath. She gave Mike a quick kiss. "Come on, let's dance!"

"How about the divorce?" Mike asked, holding her back.

"I'll speak to Paul about it the moment I get back home."

Mike still held her—would not let her go.

"What do you mean, 'speak to him'?"

"I mean I'll ask him for the divorce—right away."

"Good!" said Mike. "That's better. He took her arm. 'Now I can go in and dance. Only—'"

"Only what, Mike?"

"Just a moment," said Mike. "I don't give a hang about you getting a divorce unless you're going to marry me. You haven't said yet that you would."

Zoe laughed lightly.

"What on earth do you think I'm going to ask a divorce for?" she said.

"You mean—you—"

"Yes, Mike, that's what I mean. 'Sweetness!' Mike swept her into his arms again. He held her tightly for a moment or two.

"We're going to be very happy, Zoe—and don't you think we won't?"

"We'd better be!" said Zoe, half serious, half joking.

Then they went back inside to join the other guests.

There was little time for thoughts of romance or sentiment—or pondering over personal matters—during the days that followed. Everyone at the plant was excited over the coming presentation of the government award, and efforts were doubled. Philip, with his duties as foreman and the additional duties as the chief one in planning for the big event, was busy from early morning until late at night. He scarcely had time to see his own son except to look in upon the sleeping boy before tumbling into bed himself, dog-tired.

rien and Aggie, heading a committee to see that the plant was in gala attire, scarcely had time to grab a bite to eat during the day.

"Mike, do you really think you and I could make a go of it?" she asked.

"Of course we could!" "You see," Zoe went on, "I wouldn't want to make another mistake. If I should leave Paul, I'd want to be sure that my second marriage would last until—" "—Until death do us part," said Mike solemnly. "Listen, Zoe, you're the girl I've been waiting for all my life. You and I could show the world how happy two people can really be. We'll spend part of the winter in Florida—sandy beaches, warm sunshine, moonlight, good drinks, and the races to give us added excitement. We'll travel later—when the war is over, and the world is all straightened out. There's nothing I wouldn't do to make you happy. You believe me, don't you?"

"Yes, Mike," Zoe said, "I do believe you."

"Then what are we waiting for?" "I've got to think, Mike—be sure."

"Okay, sweetness." "Besides," Zoe went on, "what grounds can I use for divorcing Paul? We're getting on all right, to all appearances. He's never really cruel or anything like that. Only he doesn't understand me—how I feel about a lot of things. He makes cutting remarks now and then, when—" "That," said Mike, "is mental cruelty."

"It is?" "Yes, Zoe, sweetness. And many a woman has gotten divorced on such grounds."

"Mental cruelty," said Zoe under her breath. She gave Mike a quick kiss. "Come on, let's dance!"

"How about the divorce?" Mike asked, holding her back.

"I'll speak to Paul about it the moment I get back home."

Mike still held her—would not let her go.

"What do you mean, 'speak to him'?"

"I mean I'll ask him for the divorce—right away."

"Good!" said Mike. "That's better. He took her arm. 'Now I can go in and dance. Only—'"

"Only what, Mike?"

"Just a moment," said Mike. "I don't give a hang about you getting a divorce unless you're going to marry me. You haven't said yet that you would."

Zoe laughed lightly.

"What on earth do you think I'm going to ask a divorce for?" she said.

"You mean—you—"

"Yes, Mike, that's what I mean. 'Sweetness!' Mike swept her into his arms again. He held her tightly for a moment or two.

"We're going to be very happy, Zoe—and don't you think we won't?"

"We'd better be!" said Zoe, half serious, half joking.

Then they went back inside to join the other guests.

There was little time for thoughts of romance or sentiment—or pondering over personal matters—during the days that followed. Everyone at the plant was excited over the coming presentation of the government award, and efforts were doubled. Philip, with his duties as foreman and the additional duties as the chief one in planning for the big event, was busy from early morning until late at night. He scarcely had time to see his own son except to look in upon the sleeping boy before tumbling into bed himself, dog-tired.

at the decorations," said Aggie. "Come on—let's be on our way."

Helen followed her. "I'll be glad when all this is over," she said wearily.

Aggie eyed her anxiously. "What is wrong?" she said. "You sound low all of a sudden. Miss Minerva get into your hair?"

"She did," Helen admitted. "And what makes it more annoying is that she evidently knows what she's talking about."

"Paul—Zoe?"

"Exactly."

"Better listen to her," Aggie advised. "Not that I wouldn't like to have Philip for myself in case you decide on the other man."

"I'm disgusted," said Helen, "with the world in general and with myself in particular. I feel low—and awfully unhappy."

"Buck up, kid!" said Aggie. "You are on the committee with Miss Minerva and the mayor to meet the big shot and the senator at the station in an hour or so. You don't want to look as though you'd gone down to meet the body, do you?"

Helen tried to smile. "Thanks, Aggie," she said. "I'm sorry I took it out on you."

"Forget it!" said Aggie. "What's a friend for if not to spill the beans to?" She paused a moment and then said: "I wish that Zoe person would come on back. An unattached husband is a bad thing to have trotting around loose."

"You mean bad for me, don't you, Aggie?" said Helen.

"Yes, honey, I do."

"Don't worry," Helen said. "I'll keep my head on my shoulders."

"Sure—but what about your heart?"

"I'll manage that, too!"

They hurried out into the plant yard to have a look at the streamers of bunting that were draped over the fronts of the main buildings—at the flags that hung here and there—and at the bunting-draped platform and reviewing stand which had been constructed just outside the wire fence that surrounded the factory.

"All looks okay to me!" said Aggie.

"To me, too," said Helen. She glanced at her watch. "I've got to join Aunt Minerva now. She'll have a fit if I'm late."

"And you'll need plenty of time to get to the station," said Aggie, "riding behind that nag Nebuchadnezzar. The idea of driving him to the station to meet a senator and a big shot!"

"Aunt Minerva insists it'll be impressive," Helen laughed. "Show that she's in dead earnest about this winning the war business."

"Is she actually going to drive the two men through Main Street in that old canopy-top?"

"She most certainly is," said Helen. "Philip and I will ride down with her, but we'll return otherwise! Aunt Minerva figures that the Colonel Whitson, of the Ordnance Department, who's going to present the 'E,' may have an aide-camp or something. That will make three, you know—two in the rear—"

"And if Senator Simpson has gotten any fatter than he used to be," said Aggie, "he'll need plenty of room."

As they hurried back to the administration building Aggie said: "When does Paul show up with the plane?"

"Right after the 'E' is handed to Aunt Minerva," said Helen. "We go up then for pictures."

"Good luck, Helen," said Aggie, "and be careful!"

"Yes'm," said Helen. "And don't sound so discouraged!"

Sgt. Arthur Johnson Is Married In England

British Girl Is Bride Of Local Soldier

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, South Pickaway street, have just received an account of the marriage in England of Mr. Johnson's brother, Staff-Sergeant Arthur K. Johnson, son of Harry Johnson, 206 West Mill street, to Miss Norah Cotton, 124 Norwich road, Ipswich, England. "Saint Mary at the Elms church, Ipswich, England, was the scene of the wedding ceremony which united in marriage Miss Norah Cotton, 124 Norwich road, Ipswich, England, and Staff-Sergeant Arthur K. Johnson, of Circleville, on March 3, 1945. The Rev. Joseph Johnson, rector of the church, officiated at the ceremony.

"Given in marriage by her cousin, Thomas Cotton, the bride was attired in a gown of net over white satin. The bodice had a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves finished in points at the wrists, and had a row of tiny, satin-covered buttons marching from neckline to the bottom of the full skirt. Her veil of bridal illusion was held in place by a halo of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white carnations and baby breath.

"Sergeant Geist, of the 359th Fighter Squadron, served as best man. Major Tockney and Captain Irenbooth, of the squadron were also in attendance. "A reception was held at Ipswich Inn immediately following the ceremony. Relatives and friends were in attendance from the surrounding cities, including London and Oxford.

"Following the reception, the bride couple left by train for Torquay Inn, in Cockington Village, for a 10-day stay."

The new Mrs. Johnson is an accomplished pianist. Sgt. Johnson is a graduate of Circleville high school and of Ohio State university. Before entering the service April 21, 1942, Sgt. Johnson was employed in the office of the Ralston Purina Company. After his induction, he was sent to the Casey Jones Aeronautical School, Trenton, N. J. After his graduation in June, 1943, he was assigned to England as a member of the 359th Fighter Squadron.

UNCLE SAM TO HAND OUT 44,200,050 EXTRA RED POINTS

The greatest windfall of extra red points ever is going this month, and each month following, to American housewives throughout the country.

32 million extra red points, approximately, will be handed out by meat dealers to customers who turn in used fats in a great Victory drive for this essential of medicines, gunpowder, synthetic rubber, soaps, paints and a hundred other necessities on the battlefield and home front. For each pound of fat turned in, every housewife is entitled to 2 red points.

The need for used fats is still urgent. Women are urged to save every drop, every spoonful of grease possible and keep saving until final Victory over both Germany and Japan.

Replica of First Reaper Obtained By Agricultural Society

MODEL TO BE DISPLAYED IN COURT HOUSE

Copy Of Harvesting Machine To Be Shown Later At County Fairgrounds

A replica of the machine that revolutionized wheat harvesting will be on display soon in the Pickaway county court house.

The Pickaway County Agricultural Society has obtained a full scale replica of the original model of the McCormick reaper. It is now being assembled in the court house lobby and is expected to be ready for public inspection within a few days.

The reaper model was obtained by the Agricultural Society for display in the proposed exhibit building on the new fairgrounds but will be kept at the court house until buildings have been erected at the fairgrounds.

The replica was obtained on a permanent loan basis from the International Harvester company, through their Circleville dealer, Hill Implement company. Robert G. Colville, county treasurer, who led the efforts to get the model here, said the replica is one of several used during the invention of the first practical reaper by Cyrus Hall McCormick in a log blacksmith shop on the Walnut Grove Farm near Steele's Tavern, Virginia.

Previous to the invention of the reaper farmers were harvesting grain with tools not much better than were used by the Egyptians and the Israelites. The hand tools of that era used by the most skillful operators could, at best, harvest no more than two acres a day. The reaper invented by young Cyrus McCormick on the first day of its trial did as much as four men could do with the hand wielded cradles that were the only method available for cutting grain up to 1831.

The reaper was not solely the invention of young Cyrus McCormick as his father Robert McCormick had made several unsuccessful attempts to perfect a workable reaper. The first of these attempts was made about the year 1816. The son was familiar with the features that his father had used before him. The last of these failures was in 1831 a short time before young Cyrus built the first practical reaping machine.

The farm where the boy built the mechanical grain reaper is still owned by the McCormick family and the home and workshop are still standing in much the same condition as they were more than one hundred years ago. The original model of the reaper was such that someone had to stand to the rear and side of it to rake the grain off the platform. It was not until 1862 that the inventor had incorporated a rake arm to remove the grain from the platform thus eliminat-

A half a century after the first practical trial the McCormick reaper had been perfected to the extent that the grain was not only removed from the platform but tied in bundles, much the same as it is today, and layed to the side of the machine.

It was not until the first decade of the twentieth century that the combined features of the reaper and the thresher were marketed.

VFW WILL HELP FAMILIES OF WAR VETERANS

Widows and orphans of World War I veterans will receive about $37,000,000 in pensions from the United States during 1945, according to an announcement by Service Officer James Fouch, Post 3331, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A bill recently passed by congress establishes the following rates: widows without children, $35; a widow with one child ($5 for each additional child), $45; one child, $18; two children, $27 (equally divided); three children, $36 (equally divided); $4 for each additional child. Total compensation is not to exceed $74.

The bill deals entirely with widows and children of World War I veterans, no change being made in existing laws relating to pensions payable to widows and children of World War II veterans.

According to the post commander, William J. Miller, Service Officer Fouch is prepared to assist widows of World War I veterans of this area who wish to file claims. He can be contacted at the VFW home.

ter and the original Roosevelt principles established for this war.

This, I think, is the fundamental cleavage between Russian and American diplomacy. We have, for instance, carefully built up the theory of individuality of nations in our Latin American policy, while playing the role of big brother there. We have been the good neighbor, although the biggest neighbor.

Stalin does not work that way. Does not believe that way, will not follow that way, regardless of San Francisco, Roosevelt or anyone or anything. His advocacy of a veto right for the big five nations against the small (or other big nations) was in line with this.

His demand of 16 votes (taking 3) in the assembly where the smaller nations will have only one vote each, as do the large nations (excepting Britain with six through her empire subordinates) is along the same line.

I think this is the answer to the mystery troubling us. Russia seems to be going into the empire-building business like Britain. Her peace plan is to keep the upper hand, militarily, if not by militarism, and run the world order that way. We are the only champions left of the small nations.

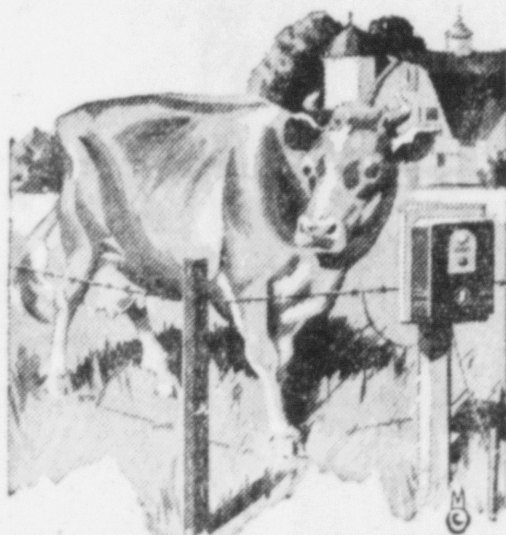

I think this is not only the cause of our trouble now, but it will cause increasing trouble from now on.
